PENETRATE GERMAN LINE NORTH OF CISTERNA

The War
Today...By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

ALLIED ARMS continued to smash forward today in what the communiqué describes as the second phase of the battle of Italy—synchronization of the offensive on the Adolf Hitler line front with the new Anzio beachhead drive which exploded suddenly yesterday like an over-ripe seed pod.

There's fierce fighting in both zones, for this is a crucial moment in the struggle for Rome and the Italian peninsula. It will determine whether Commander in Chief Sir Harold Alexander and our own Gen. Mark Clark can make good their call to destroy German Field Marshal Kesselring's army. That pledge is no mere play on words, for it means literally and grimly what it says—annihilation of the enemy by death or surrender.

The assault from the Anzio beachhead by the Fifth army, under personal command of Gen. Clark on the scene of action, puts a fresh complexion on the Italian show. As I see it, this offensive was launched with three objectives in view:

1. To cut communications behind Kesselring's main force in the Adolf Hitler line theater, and so impede his flow of supplies and reinforcements from the north.
2. To get this German army in a vise which may be tightened rapidly enough, if fortune favors us, so that the bulk of Hitler's strength in Italy may be caught and crushed.
3. To expedite the capture of Rome.

Thus far the Anzio offensive appears to be fulfilling expectations. Fifth army troops have broken into strong defensive positions and already have succeeded in cutting vital German communications.

Our boys—Lord love 'em—are reported to have battled northeastward and occupied a 2,000-yard sector of the Apennine way—the famous thoroughfare which runs southward from Rome and has been one of Kesselring's main defense lines. This has brought us within half a mile of Cisterna, the heavily fortified enemy city which stands on the Apennine way. We also extended gains across the Nazi defense line on the railroad south of Velletri.

MEANWHILE, the Allied battle line down the peninsula—only about 22 miles away at its nearest point—was surging forward on both ends. The Canadians breached the Hitler line north of Pontecorvo in a brilliant attack that is best put in the glowing words of the communiqué which said this was

GIRLS WANTED AT BASKET
FACTORY, DAMASCUS.POSTWAR PLAN
IS EXPLAINED
BY CHURCHILLSays Allies Will Decide
Any Territorial Changes
For Germany

BY WILLIAM SMITH WHITE
LONDON, May 24.—A confident Winston Churchill looked today toward the Balkans as a theater of coming victory and told commonsense: The Allies will decide whether Germany must undergo territorial changes and the Atlantic charter "in no way binds us about the future" of that country.

"We intend to set up a world order equipped with all necessary attributes of power in order to prevent the breaking out of wars or long planning of them by restless and ambitious nations."

"We have great hopes that Rome may be preserved."

In his speech of 85 minutes opening a foreign policy debate, the prime minister said the Allies had "suspended" efforts to bring Turkey in with them but "it looks probable" the Allies will be able to win the war in the Balkans and throughout southeast Europe without Turkey being involved in it, although of course the aid of Turkey would be of great help and acceleration in that process.

Churchill spoke kindly of Spain, criticizing those who "insult and abuse" the Franco government. Spain's internal policies, he asserted, were a matter for Spaniards alone.

Complete Unity Stressed

Proclaiming the British commonwealth and empire in complete unity to go on with the Allies "to beat the enemy as soon as possible," Churchill advocated "a world council of great states" to keep up enough arms to preserve peace after the war, and "a world assembly of all the powers."

His suggested "world organization," he said, would embody much of the structure of the League of Nations, but this time it must be with "overwhelming military power."

He mentioned the "western front" only once as it is commonly defined—and then to observe jocularly that "all this talk" of invasion across the channel was keeping Hitler frantic.

Using the Yugoslav situation at one point to illustrate the Allied policy, he said:

"All questions of monarchy, or republic, or leftism are strictly subordinate."

At another point he said: "In one place we support a King, in another

Senate Committee
O. K.'s Canal Plan

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 24.—The senate commerce committee today approved post-war construction of a $38,000,000 canal from Rochester, Pa., to Struthers, Ohio, to link the Youngstown-Warren steel mill district with the Ohio river.

The canal, opposed in congress for many years, would be dug in the shallow channels of the Beaver and Mahoning rivers.

Acting on a proposal of Senator Burton (R., Ohio) and Representative Kiwan (D., Ohio), the committee added the project to a house-approved Omnibus Rivers and Harbors bill.

WOOSTER, May 24.—Dr. Harold P. Lowry, professor of English at Princeton university, accepted today the presidency of Wooster college. Wooster's trustees recently named Dr. Lowry the school's chief executive, subject to his acceptance.

Dr. Lowry, a 1923 graduate of Wooster, will succeed President Charles F. Wishart, who retires Sept. 1 after 25 years as head of the institution.

The new president received his doctor's degree at Yale university in 1931 and also studied in England, Scotland and France for several years.

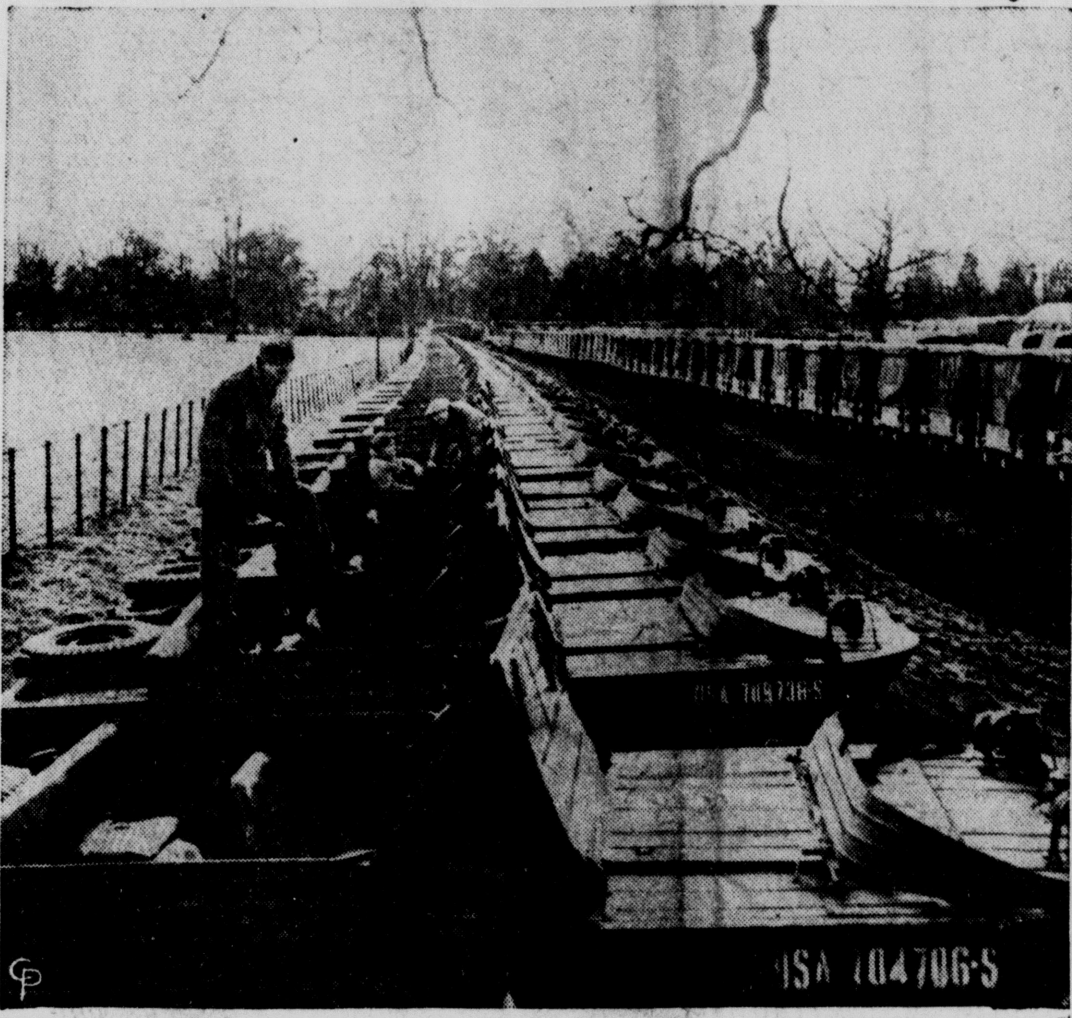

A 1934 Guggenheim fellow, Dr. Lowry is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Sigma Rho, Modern Language Association of America and the American Association of University Professors. He is the author of several books on phases of English literature and co-author of an anthology of English poetry.

DETROIT PASTOR'S
SECRETARY SLAINBody of Church Worker
Stabbed 12 Times, Is Discovered Today

(By Associated Press)
DETROIT, May 24.—Stabbed and beaten, the body of Mrs. Jean Long, 40, secretary of the pastor of the Twelfth Street Evangelical church, was found in the nave of the church at 9 a. m. today.

Police said half a dozen stab wounds were found in the chest and head, her clothing was torn and disarrayed, and her wristwatch had stopped at 8:35, presumably the time of the attack on her last night.

Rev. Newell C. Liesemer, 38, who lives next door to the church, found the body after receiving a report from Mrs. Long's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Croyle, that she had not returned home last night.

Detectives said Mr. Liesemer told them he last saw his secretary shortly after 8 p. m. when she obtained a key to the church from him and went into the church to prepare the organization's monthly letter to service men.

Shortly before midnight, the pastor was quoted as saying, he saw a light in the basement office of the church. He went to the basement and found the office empty, and the key lying on the desk, he said, and after calling Mrs. Long's name several times without response, concluded she had gone home. He said he then turned out the light and left the church.

Detectives said Mrs. Long had been estranged for several months from her husband, Kenneth Long, but that they had met almost daily since the separation.

Inspector Whitman said he believed some one may have followed Mrs. Long into the church. There was no effort at robbery, Whitman said, since Mrs. Long's purse contained several dollars and two valuable rings was found in the basement office.

EXPLAINS WORK OF
COUNTY INFIRMARY

Operation and activities of the county home near Lisbon were discussed by Ray T. Adams, superintendent, at the noon luncheon meeting of the Rotary club yesterday at the Memorial building.

The official said that the home now houses 113 persons and serves 13,000 meals a month. The major portion of the home's food and meat needs are supplied by the farm which is operated in connection with the institution. Surplus products raised on the farm are sold to reduce operating expenses.

Supt. Adams pointed out that the home maintains a 30-bed hospital and large laundry in addition to its other facilities. Thirty-three residents at the home are over 80 years, the oldest being 94 and the youngest 21.

Plans were completed for a joint meeting of Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs Monday night at the Memorial building. A dinner will be held at 6:30, followed by a program.

"SALEM'S BEST"New Tires Looming
For 'A' Card Holders
In Fall, OPA Reports

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 24.—New tires may start rolling this fall to "A" card automobile drivers whose hopes and dreams have been wearing thin together.

First, Charles F. Phillips, the OPA's new chief of rationing, said in an interview today that "A" card drivers can expect their first new tires since the start of the war when monthly allocations of synthetic rubbers reach 2,000,000 from the quota of 1,400,000.

And, from the office of the rubber director, where the allocations are set, it was learned that production of passenger car tires probably will reach the 2,000,000 mark sometime in October, November or December.

As for gasoline, Phillips said there was "nothing to indicate" that the "A" ration can be increased during the present quarter, ending July 1. He said a study of whether it will be possible to increase the "B" ration this quarter has not been completed.

Phillips stressed that not all "A" card motorists will be able to obtain new tires this year. Applications will be screened by local rationing boards and certificates will go first to those whose driving is considered most essential.

He said it probably would take three or four months to meet the demand of all "A" motorists. All "B" and "C" card drivers, Phillips pointed out, have been eligible for new tires since May 1, but it is expected there will be a backlog of applications until at least August.

Phillips said his first aim with regard to gasoline is to increase the "B" ration in the east from the present maximum of 325 miles of driving a month to 475 miles.

PATRIOTS TOLD
D-DAY NEARERFrench Underground Asked to Accept Instructions
As Orders

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, May 24.—The Allies adopted a firm military approach today in summoning French patriots to get ready for their role when D-day dawns, while in this island the disposing of troops and assembling of fleets for the western invasion went forward steadily.

The government-controlled British Broadcasting Corp. told French patriots that instructions—similar to those from the supreme headquarters of the American expeditionary force—would be given them regularly.

"It is no longer a question of voluntary service," BBC quietly informed the underground, "it now is an order to you."

"You are to keep out of German hands and hold yourselves in readiness for the day of action. That is the duty of every Frenchman."

From the German side of the radio war of words came a surprising Paris broadcast by the French commentator Robert De Beauplan declaring Allied bombing had knocked French railroads into chaos, that sabotage had put France's entire hydro-electric system out of service and "the temper of the population, especially that of Paris, is rising."

Frenchmen are blaming the Germans for all this misery.

It was considered probable the object of this gloomy view was to create over-confidence among the Allies.

On the other side of the European fortress there were further signs of discord and distress among Hitler's perturbed Balkan satellites.

Eisenhower Gives
People In Europe
3rd Invasion Talk

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, May 24.—The people of occupied Europe were called upon today in the third instructions broadcast from Supreme Commander Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters to supply complete and accurate information on the enemy's movements during the invasion.

The spokesman for the Allied invasion commander stressed the importance of accurate information on the enemy and sent out a form for them to follow.

"Do nothing active now," the spokesman warned, "but do not forget that accuracy will be all-important when our uniformed forces have need for information."

"Meanwhile, he (Eisenhower) urges you to act with the utmost caution, exercise patience, associate only with trusted patriots and, above all, maintain the discipline without which the enemy can destroy you."

A short form of report, which the people were asked to memorize, included the essential headings of when, what and how many, where and in what direction and at what speed, and anything special noted as well as separate conclusions.

5,000 Planes
Over Hitler's
Europe Today

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, May 24.—A predominantly American force of around 5,000 planes bombed Berlin, Vienna and Paris today in what may be the greatest Allied aerial assault of the war, official announcements and German radio reports said.

Up to 2,000 U. S. heavy bombers and fighters soared from Britain for twin attacks on Berlin and German airfields fringing Paris.

Another great armada of Mediterranean air force bombers and fighters swept across the Alps from Italy and battled to the area of Vienna, railroad transport and airplane manufacturing center of southeast Europe, the Berlin radio said.

Wave upon wave of U. S. bombers shook the threatened French invasion coast with bombs that rattled houses in England, 20 miles across the English channel.

Awe-Inspiring Sight

South coast British dwellers said the outpouring of aerial strength was awe-inspiring and the greatest many ever had seen. The attacks carried the renewed aerial assault through its sixth consecutive day, running the bomb total to above 25,000 tons for the period.

The Berlin attack was the fourth U. S. blow at the rubble German capital this month and came less than 12 hours after a rain of two-ton blockbusters from British Mosquitos. The swift, wooden planes go down the German airfields and roads before dawn. They suffered no loss.

Germany's thinly stretched air defenses were split wide open, but the Nazis insisted that intense battles were fought over Berlin itself and the Baltic region above, and in the Vienna region. The Paris radio said the south, southwest and southeast suburbs of Paris were bombed and that "damage was considerable."

As a result of these newest gains, the Fifth army's penetration from its jumping off point on the main front in the current offensive exceeded 30 air line miles.

PENDING APRIL, 1945

The almost forgotten case of United Mine Workers is now settled by WLB decision after five months of travail, representing the anti-climax of a dispute which lasted more than a year and brought four general work stoppages in coal mines. The decision gives portal-to-portal pay, back payment in settlement of retroactive claims for portal-to-portal pay and a money increase in wages of $1.50 a day on the basic scale.

Unless further complications develop, mines seized by the government now can be turned back to their owners; WLB approval of the contract between United Mine Workers and management means that all points in controversy are settled until April, 1945. At that time, no doubt, John L. Lewis, having obtained virtually everything he asked for in the controversy which began in the spring of 1943 and was settled in the spring of 1944, will be prepared to open a new controversy between himself, as spokesman for his powerful union, and WLB, as spokesman for the United States government.

Under continuation of a labor policy of improvisation and deadlock, breakable only by seizure of the property affected, there then would be reenactment of the whole dreary tragedy of slow retreat and ultimate surrender, exactly as planned by Mr. Lewis. His realistic approach to collective bargaining never looked better than it does against the foil of the Roosevelt administration's catch-as-catch-can labor policy.

PROPAGANDA RESISTANCE

American civilians are unable to appraise the effect of the propaganda used by the Germans and Japanese to weaken the morale of United States soldiers, but from what they have seen and heard of the enemy's attempts, they are psychologically wrong. The effect of urging an American to give up in the face of adversity—the standard appeal—is likely to be a renewal of his determination to keep on fighting.

The role of propaganda in World War II remains indeterminate. There appears to have been a minimum of psychological warfare, as it is politely called, but it is impossible to know whether that is an indication of lack of intent, or only of skill in technique. A billion and a quarter leaflets, newspapers and magazines have been dropped over German and German-occupied territory in the last four and a half years, proof that the possibilities are not being neglected by the Allies, at least.

Perhaps Allied propaganda resistance is so high that Germany and Japan know they are licked before they start, now that Allied populations have been put on the alert. If the come-on-buddy-why-don'tcha-surrender technique tried on Allied fighting men is typical of Axis efforts, they are futile. Unfortunately, however, it must be suspected that many of the little lies and rumors which create friction from apparently domestic sources may be Axis propaganda of a concealed and, therefore, more vicious variety.

COMMUNISTS DISSOLVE THEMSELVES

An event which will take a good deal of figuring out occurred last weekend in New York City, where the Communist party of the United States dissolved itself, then immediately reorganized as the Communist Political association.

The title switch means, nominally, that Communists have ceased to be a political party. However, they will continue to be politically active. Their presidential candidate this year, instead of Earl Browder, Communist general secretary, will be Franklin D. Roosevelt. This apparently is going to be the principal effect of the change; as an association, the Communists will support political candidates deemed friendly to their cause, instead of backing their own party members. Mr. Roosevelt, under this theory, can do more for the Communists than Mr. Browder.

Secretary Browder says there now are 80,000 Communists in the United States, 22,000 of them added in a drive that began in February after the executive committee announced the plan to disband as a political party. He explained to the convention whose votes dissolved the party that the aim of making this a socialist nation is being abandoned because "there does not exist now . . . an actual or potential majority support for such a program."

Why that decision was delayed until 1944, like most Communist decisions, is known only to the insiders who made it.

NO MANIA FOR AMERICANS

One of the psychiatrists who addressed the profession's recent convention in Philadelphia, Dr. Edward A. Strecker of University of Pennsylvania, spoke of isolationism as a kind of mania, closely related to schizophrenia. It is a lively possibility. A similar case may be made for the followers of Hitler in Germany, who are victims of a kind of mass paranoia.

But if isolationism is a mania, then clearly the kind of internationalism proposed by persons at the other extreme also is a mania; they are just as extreme, just as carried away by delusions as isolationists. Between them and the isolationists, fortunately, stands the overwhelming majority of Americans, who are daffy in neither direction—and for them the psychiatrists need make no explanation. They are not mental cases, but merely American patriots trying to keep track of the mental cases.

Now that Vice President Henry Wallace is out of the country, on a trip to Siberia and China at the President's request, the New Deal leaders and the chief executive can proceed to select a running mate for the President's fourth term candidacy.

A variety of nothing is better than a monotony of something.—Jean Paul Richter, 1807.

THE STARS SAY:

For Thursday, May 25

A SUDDEN AND quite unprecedented course of events may bring many thrills and benefits, providing these surprising opportunities be grasped with alacrity, sound judgment and an absence of emotional, impulsive or eccentric behavior. It is probable that a radical change is called for, and that business, finance, exceptional talents or skills, are involved, with romance and adventure of a dramatic and far-reaching significance. Quick action may give singular results, but reckless, wild or sensational moves might precipitate peculiar crises.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of astonishing and quite unforeseen adventures, with sudden upheavals, peculiar changes and startling opportunities to put the affairs on a progressive, productive and perhaps a radical, strange and thrilling basis. Change, travel, romance and high adventure are precipitated by an extraordinary development of peculiar situations. Wisely manipulated there may be joy and happiness, as well as good fortune and spectacular denouements. But shun wild and erratic conduct. Romance should reach high levels of enjoyment and celebration.

A child born on this day may have exceptional talents and creative skills with high ambitions assuring it a carefree, adventurous and romantic career. It should achieve some degree of restraint on its emotional or unconventional urges.

Term "Colitis" Often Incorrectly Applied

By LOGAN CLENDENIN, M. D.

COLITIS IS A term that has come to be used very indiscriminately. Strictly speaking it means inflammation of the colon or large bowel and as such it is fortunately a rare condition—fortunately because such things as ulcerative colitis, amebic colitis and tuberculous colitis are very serious. But from the extent of my correspondence from those who say they have colitis the conditions they so name are very common and range all the way from our old friend constipation, now disguised under the name colitis, to irritable and nervous bowel, the cathartic habit and mucous colitis, the nature of which last condition nobody knows.

Dr. Clendenin will answer questions of general interest, only, and then only through his column.

Chronic constipation may well become a colitis, even an ulcerative colitis if treated regularly and daily with cathartics—purgatives. There is no kind of drug, with the exception of actual narcotics, or chronic alcoholic drugging, that is so common and so harmful. But man from the earliest times has always had a yen for purgatives. The earliest printed document relating to medicine was a purgation calendar which in 1457 told people when to take cathartics. In January of that year they were advised "Laxatives should be taken on the 9th, 10th, 11th, 18th, 19th and 28th day of this month." Man, as Dr. Osier said, has an inborn craving for medicine.

Constipation itself is not a disease and in spite of all the dire consequences that we have been warned will follow from it there is probably not a person on this continent today who is really sick or poisoned or toxic because of lack of regularity of evacuation of his colon.

It evacuates itself according to stimuli largely depending on the character and composition of the food. Many people are eating fatty and regularly refined articles of diet that have no roughage or cellulose in them and then take cathartics because they do not have a daily evacuation.

No General Rule

There is no general rule that the bowels must empty once a day. Some people are timed to twice or three times a week, some to twice daily schedules. The symptoms such as headache, fatigue, biliousness, coated tongue and loss of appetite that are ascribed to what is supposed to be stasis or absorption are purely nervous figments born of fear.

It can be put down as a general rule that any cathartic should be used only once not regularly in any period of time. If used daily it is a sign that something else is needed. The stages of colitis, or better the old term constipation, are three—(1) atonic, (2) catarrhal and (3) spastic. Atonic constipation is not productive of any danger or disease. Individuals with this condition are free from symptoms except for infrequent and sluggish bowel evacuations. The later stages which are of increasing seriousness do not impose themselves on atonic constipation except as a result of bad treatment, and this usually means home treatment, with irritating purgatives or colonic flushings.

Catarrhal Colitis

The catarrhal form may not develop for years after the purgative habit has begun. In this stage the patients complain of flatulence and abdominal distension. There is noted the presence of mucus in the stool. These cases are often called mucous colitis.

The spastic stage brings on pain and increased flatulence. The symptoms are aggravated by purgatives, coarse food and enemas. Here there may actually be small ulcerations on the surface of the colon.

The proper treatment of the first stage is by diet, healthy outdoor living, as much exercise as possible, and especially the mental attitude to stop worrying about a daily evacuation, or its absence. Some people need more roughage than others. For some indeed a daily evacuation, or its absence, some people need more roughage than others. For some indeed a great deal of roughage is too irritating. But for most one fruit daily or fruit juice, a whole vegetable, not pureed or strained, with plenty of cellulose—like celery, onion, cabbage, asparagus, beans, carrots, turnips, beets—is sufficient to regulate the colon.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

As the little circle of light played on the various objects in Syria Verne's living room, Argus whistled. "Some spot," he murmured admiringly. "Look at that painting over there." He concentrated his flash on a huge canvas in a heavy gilt frame. It was a Van Gogh. The rug beneath their feet felt thick and soft. Built-in bookcases lined one end of the room, reaching from the ceiling down to about four feet from the floor. There were bookcases also on either side of the French windows.

In one corner, its back and one side surrounded with books was a satin, square mahogany table. On it was a telephone. To the left was a lamp. In the space directly over its smooth surface and set in the bookcase was a machine that looked like a radio except that it had no dial.

"According to the diagram in the paper," said Argus, "Syria was found lying face down at the base of that table with the telephone in her right hand."

"It gives me the creeps!" whispered Ellen, her teeth chattering. Argus crossed the room and turned on the lamp. Soft light filled the room. Ellen looked around.

"That better?" Argus asked. "Yes," Ellen agreed. "What a lovely apartment! I'd imagined Syria as living in a modern sort of place with white rugs and lots of mirrors. But this room is so comfortable, so well done. The pieces in here are the sort a person of excellent taste would spend years in collecting."

"It is out of character at that. I'll lay you a bet that Syria didn't furnish the place herself. If she had there'd be more chaise longue!" "Look at these porcelain on the mantelpiece," Ellen picked up two figurines, a shepherd and his shepherdess. She turned one of them over. Stamped on the bottom was the word "Limoges."

Then the detective directed Ellen to "start over there by the entrance to this room and pretend you've just come home. You hear the phone ringing. You come over and answer it. Just as you get the receiver to your ear there's a shot. You fall down at the base of this table. Got it?"

"Yes, but I don't like it very much." Ellen followed instructions. Argus watched her carefully. She stepped off the distance from the door to the telephone and picked up the receiver.

"Bang!" exclaimed Argus. Ellen fell to the floor. "Stay where you are a minute, will you, darling? Anything strike you as strange about that shot?" "It was an exceptionally peaceful bang."

"No, seriously, I'll show you what I mean. This table is in a corner, flush against the wall and the bookcases, which surround two sides. To

"Castner's Cutthroats" Held Island Near Alaska, For Almost a Year, Alone

(By United Press)

HEADQUARTERS, ALASKA DEPARTMENT—How a party of 10 Alaskan Scouts—members of the famed "Castner's Cutthroats" platoon—held a remote North Pacific island for 10 months, beachcombing for food and furs, a large part of the time without contact with the mainland, has been revealed here.

The scouts were sent to the tiny, cliff-girt island, midway between Alaska and Asia, to make certain military studies and to report any Japanese activity that might develop in this area. The island was uninhabited, and its only previous occupants had been a fugitive murderer and three native women he had kidnapped from the mainland and brought to the island to share his hideout. The scouts arrived by warship in September, lost most of their supplies in the surf during the landing, and remained on the island until the following June, enduring savage storms, loneliness, near-famine and the bitter cold of the ice-locked north.

Yet on their return to this headquarters, they were as healthy as bear cubs, and as nonchalant concerning their long, dangerous vigil as it had been a mere week-end mission.

Driftwood Only Fuel

The 10 are Sgt. Robert Garr, Salt Lake City, Utah, Sgt. Ben Schlegel, Bloomfield, Ia., Sgt. John McKee, Portland, Ore., Sgt. Lynn Watt, Wichita, Kan., Cpl. Jacob Stalker, Noutak, Alaska, Cpl. George Ray, San Francisco, Cal., Cpl. Ray Pemberton, Muskegon, Mich., Sgt. Jacob Oleynik, Utica, N. Y., Pvt. John Blue, Kansas City, Mo., and Sgt. Harry Lyons, Morgantown, W. Va.

"The Navy put fuel ashore for us," explained Cpl. Stalker, a full-blooded Eskimo, "but before we could carry it above the tide mark a storm blew up and the surf carried the fuel away. So we had to hustle driftwood all winter. This kept us pretty darned busy, as the only wood that washes ashore on the island comes from the mouth of the Yukon, nearly a thousand miles distant."

"The only company we had were the white foxes," Sergeant Garr said, "and one night they played a trick on us that like to scared me stiff. We were expecting the Japs to come in and make a pass at us, and so of course we had a defense plan all worked out, figuring on making the going very rough for them. Well one night we heard something in the grass behind our hut. It was a kind of furtive sound—like a look would make sneaking up for a look through the window. That morning one of the men thought he had sighted the silhouette of a Jap ship out in the fog, so we all the left is the lamp. Now, the only way to answer that phone was the way you did—walk directly up to it and pick it up."

"Yes, but—"

"Stand in front of this table again and hold that receiver in your hand for a second," Ellen did so. "Remember that Syria was shot through the chest as she stood there. Look around you. Where could the murderer have stood in order to have shot her through the chest? You're facing the bookcase and this built-in machine that looks like a radio but which is an air-conditioner. To your left is a lamp and a chair. From the position the body was in when she was found, we know that some one must've been standing directly in front of her. But where?"

"That's right. Unless the murderer was standing on the table. There's no room any place else."

"Exactly. And the murderer wasn't standing on the table because the angle at which the bullet entered the body shows that. So that leaves two other possibilities. Either there must be a hidden panel behind the bookcase through which the murderer fired, or some sort of mechanical gadget must've been hidden behind the books or—"

"But how—if it was some mechanical device, how would the murderer know that the bullet would hit Syria?" Ellen asked. "I've got it! Yep! That must be it!"

"What must be it?" "This air-conditioning machine. Look at these little holes in the grillwork." The holes were about half an inch in diameter and formed a circular pattern on the face of the machine. "They serve as ventilators and they're just about the right size for a bullet to pass through."

"You mean—"

"I mean that I'll find a gun inside this machine. It's in the proper position, just over the table, so that any one picking up the phone could come in direct range of a shot."

"But even if that were true, I still don't see how the murderer could be sure any one would be around when it went off," Ellen declared.

Argus didn't reply. He was dusting some powder over the top of the air-conditioner. He waited a second and then blew off the excess.

"Is that how you find fingerprints?" Ellen asked, following the operation with rapt attention. "If there are any. I brought it along just in case."

"Are there?" Argus inspected the surface carefully through a pocket magnifying glass. "No. I hardly expected to find any. I wonder if there's a screwdriver in the joint. Take a look in the kitchen, will you, darling?" Ellen returned a few minutes thought this was it—an attack. We grabbed our rifles and grenades and were making a rush for the door, when something hit the top of the hut with a tremendous crash—hit it so hard it felt like it was coming in.

"I jumped outside, ready to throw a grenade at the first thing I saw moving. But there weren't any Japs there—only white foxes. The little devils had gnawed through the rope guy lines of our radio mast, and that was what had fallen across the hut. I'll bet we were the most relieved soldiers in the north."

Shadowed By Bear
Cpl. Stalker, the Eskimo lad, is given unanimous credit by the others as being the star of the group, as his experience in hunting and fishing kept the party supplied with trout, codfish, seal meat and a variety of ducks, cranes and geese. There was a period of 10 days, however, when Stalker says he was not interested in going hunting. This was when a giant polar bear landed on the island, apparently from an ice cake, and showed uncanny cleverness in following the men about the island without once exposing himself to rifle fire that the men concluded the animal was hunting them, and that he had apparently had previous experience hunting humans.

"It was a spooky business having the bear laying ambushes for us there in the gray winter twilight and the swirling fogs. He was a big brute, too. The tracks of his front feet measured 10 inches wide and 15 inches long. Finally, he disappeared—got on another ice cake. I guess, and went back to sea."

The worst hardship, the scouts agreed was a lack of salt. The greater part of their supply was lost in landing, so that toward spring the only salt they had was that contained in their supply of canned food. "I think the lack of salt was getting us down a little, along toward the end of our stay there," Sgt. Lyons said. "When we first landed on the island, I could pick up a big drift log and carry it to camp by myself. But after 10 months, I needed help. Of course, they may have been heavier logs. I dunno."

During their exploration of the island the scouts found a large prehistoric Eskimo village, never reported before, and the wreck of an ancient Russian sailing ship. They also came upon the huts that had been occupied by the fugitive murderer and his kidnapped harem before the killer was apprehended and taken to the mainland for trial. They said they would like to examine the old ship in summer—but were certainly not going to ask to be sent back.

later with a small screwdriver and a pair of pliers. Argus was squinting into the ventilating holes, one after another.

"Now I'll take the top off this machine and we'll see what we shall see," Argus suited the action to his words. It took the detective only a couple of minutes to complete the job. He took his flashlight from his pocket and explored the contrivance.

"Yip-pee.... Here's the gun! Come and look, Ellen."

"Golly!" she exclaimed, leaning over his shoulder. "Then the murderer didn't have to be in the apartment at all when she was shot. But how did it work? Was it like a time bomb?"

Argus took down several books carefully and examined each one as he did so. Then he set them on a nearby chair. "There's a wire back here. Let's see where it leads to." Without touching it he followed its course back of some more books. He removed these likewise. "Look!" he said excitedly. "This wire leads into the telephone box where the bell is and it's hidden from sight behind those books."

"What do you make of that, Argus?"

"Unless my guess is wrong, darling, it means just one thing! Syria Verne was murdered by telephone!"

"Yep. I don't know quite how it worked yet, but I will." He played his light along the bookshelf and the wire leading to the bell box. Then he returned to the machine itself. The gun inside was mounted so that the end of the barrel was only a fraction of an inch away from the ventilator hole in the center of the left pattern; one end of a piece of twine was fastened to the trigger and the other was fastened to the revolving axis of the blower that cooled the air. The wire from the phone box led to the switch that started the motor of the air-conditioning machine.

"Very ingenious!" observed Argus. "Our murderer seems to be something of an electrical expert. Apparently he also had a knowledge of this apartment and its layout, and knew when Syria would be out, so he'd have time to install it."

Something caught his eye and he picked it up. It was a short, bristly red hair, barely noticeable inside the machine at the base of the gun mount.

"Find something?" Ellen asked. "A reddish hair. See if you can find an envelope to put it in."

Ellen found one in a Queen Anne desk on the other side of the room and handed it to him. Argus dropped the hair into it and placed the envelope in his pocket. Taking another piece of paper and a pencil he jotted down the serial number of the air-conditioning machine and the make. Then, adjusting his camera, he took a flashlight photo of the interior of the unit. He put in a new plate and replaced the expended bulb.

"Shhhh!" warned Ellen. "What's that?"

HEALTH QUIZ

Do you have poor digestion? ☐ YES ☐ NO
Do you feel headachy after eating? ☐ YES ☐ NO
Do you get sour or upset easily? ☐ YES ☐ NO
Do you feel tired—listless? ☐ YES ☐ NO

Now everyone knows that to get the good out of the food you eat—you must digest it properly. But what most people don't know is that Nature must produce about two pints of the digestive juice—liver bile—each day to help digest your food. If Nature fails, your food may remain undigested, lie sour and heavy within you.

Thus, it is simple to see that one way to aid digestion is to increase the flow of liver bile. Now, Carter's Little Liver Pills start to increase this flow quickly for thousands—often in as little as thirty minutes. When bile flow increases, your digestion may improve. And, soon you're on the road to feeling better—which is what you're after.

Don't depend on artificial aids to counteract indigestion—when Carter's, taken as directed, aid digestion after Nature's own order. Get Carter's Little Liver Pills today—only 25¢. You'll be glad you did.

Aged Woman Is Own Attorney In Ohio Supreme Court Case

By H. H. DAUGHERTY
COLUMBUS, May 24.—An aged gray-haired woman who claims no legal education stood before the bar of the Ohio supreme court yesterday and pleaded masterfully a defense against sale of her home for taxes.

She was Mrs. Mary M. Hughes of Oxford, who has been trying for years to establish a claim that her property is non-taxable because it was given by the federal government almost a century and a half ago to establish an institution of learning. The state, as trustee, used the land to establish Miami University.

With all the poise of an experienced attorney, Mrs. Hughes, dressed in a black suit and white shoes, walked calmly to the bar and with a "may it please the court" began her argument based upon the constitution and various U. S. Supreme court decisions to which she referred from memory.

At times as the argument progressed she would remove her spectacles and, holding them in her right hand, emphasize with gestures a particular point which she considered pertinent to the case.

She was appealing from a state board of tax appeals decision which had refused to exempt her property from taxation. She contended that a state law passed in 1858 providing for taxing such property was unconstitutional in that it abridged the original grant of the federal government.

In the meantime her property has been sold for non-payment of the taxes.

"It was a dirty trick, wasn't it?" she exclaimed.

Attorneys who had remained in the courtroom to hear her argument expressed amazement at her knowledge of constitutional law as well as statutory law and her ability to argue her points concisely. She referred to ex post facto laws, purchases in fee simple, life estates and other legal terms as though she were the creator of them.

Manager Southworth Of Cardinals Says Night Baseball Okay

SAYS BIG CROWDS GOOD INDICATION OF FANS' DESIRES

Thinks Majors Should Plan According To War Needs

BY JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Every-night-baseball found a supporter in Manager Billy Southworth of the St. Louis Cardinals today as the majors started their second inter-seasonal series.

Remarking on last night's turnout of 22,145 at Brooklyn and the consistently high attendance at Washington's after dark games, Billy the Kid observed:

"It is a matter for the league heads and directors but if they change their policy and play every night in all the parks it will be okay with me and my players. If more people can enjoy the game at night in this war year, the least we can do is to play the game. An every-night diet would be easier on the boys than this on-and-off routine that scrambles our meal schedules."

Under present regulations, the two St. Louis teams play 21 night games each and the other clubs with lights play 14 each except Washington which was granted permission to play all home dates after dark except Sundays and holidays from May 10 to Sept. 17.

Manager Mel Ott of the New York Giants probably would prefer to forget the night games after last night's experience when a collision between Johnny Rucker and Charley Mead, causing Rucker to drop a fly ball, cost him a ball game 3-2. There were two out in the last of the ninth and the Giants had a one-run lead when the blow fell.

Bill Voiselle had pitched himself in and out of trouble all night but had started to walk off the hill to mark down another win when Rucker dropped the ball. Les Webster, who replaced Rube Melton in the seventh got credit for his first win of the year.

The Brooklyn spectacle was the only big league game scheduled but all 16 clubs swing back into action today in the National League's eastern cities and the American's western half.

BIG TEN COACHES MEET TOMORROW TO MAP SCHEDULE

Teams Vie For Track and Tennis Honors At Illinois

CHICAGO, May 24. — Western Conference football coaches will meet tomorrow to consider gridiron schedules for 1945 and 1946. They will draw up the basketball cards at a Friday session.

Meanwhile, all of the Big Ten schools will take part in the annual track and field meet at the University of Illinois Saturday. Michigan's Wolverines, despite the loss of three key men are favorites to win the 44th annual event. Illinois and Purdue rank next in line.

Bob Ufer, who injured an ankle last week-end, and Elroy Hirsch and Elmer Swanson, regular members of the baseball team, will not compete in the meet. Michigan's baseball team plays a double-header with Indiana on Saturday. Hirsch is scheduled to pitch one game.

Swanson is regular shortstop. The Big Ten's golf and tennis tournaments also will be held this weekend. The University of Chicago, which yesterday announced abandonment of intercollegiate athletics for the coming year, and Iowa will not be represented in the golf meet, but all conference schools are expected to enter tennis teams.

Ohio State is the defending tennis champion, but Michigan is favored to take the title.

Odd Fish Caught

NEW YORK, May 24. A freak of the fish world—a five-pound shad described as "half man and half woman"—was discovered by a cutter at a Fulton street stand today.

The shad, caught in the Connecticut river, had both the roe of the female and the milt of the male. During spawning season, the roe shad lays the roe and the buck shad lays the milt over it.

Officials of the American Museum of Natural History, who provided the "half man, half woman" description, said they would preserve the specimen.

Earnings of chemists increase steadily with advancing years of experience and reach a maximum at approximately 60 years of age.

Washington To Mark Sending of First Telegram 100 Years Ago This Month

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON—On May 24, 1844 Samuel F. B. Morse demonstrated to an incredulous public one of the first miracles of sound communication when he tapped out the telegraph—“What Hath God Wrought!”—from the old U. S. Supreme Court Chamber in the Capitol at Washington to Alfred Vail at the Baltimore & Ohio railroad station near Baltimore.

Exactly on the same day 100 years later, Congressmen will meet at the Capitol to witness the reenactment of a great moment in history. Ernest E. Morris, president of the Southern railroad, will telegraph the same message from the old Supreme Court Chamber to R. B. White, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, at their Monticore station near Baltimore.

White will send back the telegram just as Morse's assistant did in 1844 to confirm to the spectators the absolute accuracy of the Morse telegraph system.

Early Trial Jeered
Morse, a portrait painter who had dabbled with electricity at Yale, had conceived the idea of an electro-magnetic telegraph in 1832, and five years later flashed instantaneous signals from one telegraph instrument to another.

From 1837 to 1844, he made four public demonstrations of the telegraph, all but one of them successful. On Oct. 19, 1842, Morse had a temporary setback when a cable line from Governor's Island to Battery Place, New York City, was interrupted by a fishing boat, and the demonstration failed. The spectators at the Battery had come to ridicule Morse's invention and they jeered at his explanation of a broken line.

Morse's friend and co-worker, Alfred Vail, obtained financial backing from his father, Judge Vail, and together they set up a workshop in an old factory at Morris-town, N. J.

On Jan. 6, 1838, Judge Vail still skeptical about the invention he was backing, gave Morse a message: “A patient waiter is no loser” and was amazed to see it transferred from one end of the factory to the other.

That same year, Morse successfully demonstrated the telegraph to President Martin Van Buren and cabinet members in Washington but failed to get a bill through Congress that would enable him to construct a telegraph system for public use.

Five years later, however, minutes before the 1843 sessions of Congress closed, a bill appropriating $30,000 for an experimental line from Washington to Baltimore was passed and later signed by President Tyler.

Morse obtained permission from the president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to construct the approved line along the B. & O. tracks.

Government Refused Offer
By the time the Whig convention in Baltimore was underway, May 1, 1844, the line had been completed from Washington to Annapolis Junction, halfway to Baltimore. Vail brought the news of Henry Clay's nomination to Annapolis Junction and wired it to Washington. The delegates returned to Washington only to discover that the Capitol had already heard the news.

On May 4, a skeptical public became an enthusiastic audience and after Morse had sent the key message, “What Hath God Wrought,” from the Capitol, he and Vail kept up an exchange of news comment for the benefit of the spectators. Several days later the line was opened for the public use.

Morse offered his telegraph to the government for $100,000, but the offer was refused and the original line between Washington and Baltimore was taken over by Western Union Telegraph Co. in 1856.

Morse's original invention was the starting point for later inventions that further revolutionized the world of communication, the radio, cable and teletype.

Frosh Take Junior High In Track Meet, 75 to 40

Capturing firsts in 11 of the 13 events, the Freshmen racked up a track win over the Junior High squad yesterday at Reilly stadium 75 to 40.

Bob Boone led the scoring for both squads as he totaled 164 points by winning firsts in the 100-yard dash, high jump, broad jump and as a member of the Freshman half mile relay team.

Bob Payer, promising Junior High star, took second honors with a first in the shot put, seconds in the discus and broad jump, and a third in the high jump. He collected 12 points for his team.

Third was Freshman Hodge with 114 points. A first in the discus and another in the 220-yard dash together with his 14 share of the winning half mile relay team points gave him his total.

The Freshmen won all the events except the shot put and the 440-yard dash, which was taken by Junior High's Crawford.

Summary of Events
50-yard dash—McKee (F.) won; Bingham (F.) second; Theiss (Jr. High) third. Time: 6.3 seconds.
100-yard dash—B. Boone (F.) won; Bingham (F.) second; Theiss (Jr. High) third. Time: 11.3 seconds.
Shot put—Payer (Jr. High) won; Crowgey (F.) second; Dressel (F.) third. Distance: 29 ft. 6 in.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON
NEW YORK, May 24.—The Jackson, Mich., baseball school for kids will wind up tomorrow with a program that was rained out earlier this month and postponed until the Tigers finished their eastern trip.

The co-operative venture of the Detroit club, the Jackson Booster club and Recreation Director Cliff Weatherwax was so successful that several other Michigan cities are planning to copy it.

Battle Creek will hold a school in June and Kalamazoo will operate next year. This department will sketch the idea just in case anyone else is interested.

SCHOOL'S OUTDOORS
Instruction at Jackson was provided by Lew Fonseca, American league promotion man who gave a lesson on hitting besides showing his films; Jud Haynes, Western Michigan coach, explained infield play, and Ray Fisher of the University of Michigan conducted a session for pitchers and catchers and helped several young hurlers overcome various faults. Scout Wish Egan and Councilman Billy Rogell will head the Detroit delegation.

“It is not a talent school,” explains Sports Editor Brick Fleming of the Jackson Citizen Patriot. “It's the first time in my memory of 25 years of sports that big league and college coaches operated in giving the kids something they need—free instructions.”

A ROOKIE A DAY
Danny Cardella, Giants' A pickup from a local shippard league, Danny was shoved into right field when Manager Mel Ott was hurt. He'll stay there as long as he's hitting unless he breaks his neck trying to field a base hit off that right field wall at the Polo Grounds.

A little guy with a big wallop, he hits like Musial, runs like Rucker and fields like Babe Herman at his worst.

When a pitcher buzzed one under his chin his first time at bat in the big league, Danny asked: “Are they afraid of me already?”

“You can't bench a guy like that, especially when he hit 375 on the club's western tour.”

AL SMITH TRYING FOR SECOND GAME

Will Be Honored Tonight At Sports Writers' Banquet

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, May 24.—Al Smith, Cleveland Indians mound staff veteran, is a busy man today. Smith seeks his second win of the 1944 season against the Washington Nationals this afternoon. He has lost three games and won but once this season.

Last year Al piled up 17 victories against seven defeats to win plans against Cleveland sports writers, who voted him most valuable Tribesman of the season. Tonight the Tribe hurler will be honored at the annual banquet of the Cleveland chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. His prize will be an angling outfit.

The Tribe rested yesterday, after winning an exhibition game at Bainbridge, Md., Naval Training station. The Washington series will include on Thursday the first home night game for the Indians this year, when Mel Harder will try for the 202nd triumph of his major league career.

Catcher Gus Mancuso of the Giants played only one season with Syracuse in the International League but it was one of his best in baseball. He batted .372 in 82 games.

Have a Coca-Cola = As you were

... a way to relax on a battleship

Wherever a U. S. battleship may be, the American way of life goes along... in sports, humor, customs and refreshment. So, naturally, Coca-Cola is there, too, met with frequently. Have a "Coke" is a phrase as common aboard a battle-wagon as it is ashore. It's a signal that spells out We're pals. From Atlanta to the Seven Seas, Coca-Cola is spreading the custom of the pause that refreshes—has become a symbol of happy comradeship in many lands.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

achieved "after extremely heavy fighting against great opposition. The Canadian corps has greatly distinguished itself in this, its first action as a corps."

Well, that's nothing new for the Canadians. I saw them in action in some of the hottest spots of the last war, and they're grand fighters.

While the Canadians were thus battering at the German left wing, American and French troops were doing women's service on the right flank in the coastal region. Steady progress was made in that sector. Continued Allied success will be bound to have heavy political repercussions, especially in the neighboring Balkans. Possibly we have one highly important reaction in the report from Ankara that Russia has developed an ultimatum to Bulgaria, giving the Bulgars until midnight of May 25 to "change their policy" the penalty of refusal being a rupture of diplomatic relations.

British Prime Minister Churchill may have had the Italian progress in mind when he told the house of commons today that the Allies have stopped trying to persuade Turkey to join them in the war but that it looks "probable" in spite of our disappointment that the United Nations will be able to win in the Balkans and throughout southeast Europe without the Turks being involved.

Invasion Weather

LONDON, May 24—A warm sun sent the temperature up to nearly 70 degrees by 8 a. m. today as cloudless weather prevailed along the English invasion coast, but a haze limited visibility over Dover strait during the morning. a Communist. There is no attempt by us to enforce particular ideologies. We only want to beat the enemy and then, in happy and serene peace, let the best expression be given to the will of the people."

In touching on British and Russian relations, the prime minister said it seemed to be the great desire of the people of both countries to be friends and referred to the "marked departures from conceptions which were held years ago for reasons we can all understand."

He reported that peace terms had been offered Rumania by Russia and described them as "remarkably generous" in many respects, saying they "made no suggestions of altering the standards of society in that country." Similarly, he said the Soviet had been "very patient" with Finland.

Churchill ranked the Japanese with the Germans as those who must give in without condition—suggesting that all satellite Axis powers might perhaps escape with lighter sentences. He warned both Spain and Turkey—the last big neutrals in the Mediterranean area—that Allied victory was coming in the Balkans with or without the support of new recruits.

PATRIOTS

Moscow radio reported last night that Field Marshal Gen. Maximilian Von Weichs, German commander in the Balkans, was in Sofia to review Nazi troops in Bulgaria, believed to be more than two divisions.

German control of Bulgaria seemed to depend entirely on the ability of these troops to keep the restless population in check. Istanbul advices said there are sufficient Bulgarian troops in the country to defeat these Nazis should their leaders resist German pressure for greater Bulgarian participation in the war.

TEXAS DEMOCRATS PICK TWO SLATES

Only One Group of Delegates Can Be Seated At Convention, However

(By Associated Press)
Texas Democrats posed a tough problem today for the national convention in their split into two fighting factions, one choosing an unopposed slate of delegates and another picking a delegation pledged to support a fourth term for President Roosevelt.

It will be up to the national gathering at Chicago in July to decide which group will be seated.

Here's what the Texans, meeting in separate chambers at the state capital, did in their first split into two conventions in 52 years:

The pro-Roosevelt faction lost two test votes on instructing the state's 48 delegates, withdrawn and named their own "to work and fight" for President Roosevelt's re-nomination.

Those in the original convention voted to send an unopposed delegation.

By contrast, things went quietly in the Texas Republican convention at Houston which voted to send its 33 delegates to the national convention unopposed. Anti-administration speeches by Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio and others were loudly welcomed.

The delegates caucused after the convention and decided not to follow the vote-as-a-unit rule, indicating that they would divide at least their first ballot votes between Bricker and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Bricker Drive Goes On
At Washington, meanwhile, supporters of Gov. Bricker said today they would carry their fight for the Republican presidential nomination into the national convention despite the formidable backing piled up behind Dewey in state-by-state choices of delegates.

Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) told a reporter there would be no wavering in the Bricker drive, which Roy D. Moore, the candidate's campaign manager, has predicted will end with the Ohio governor in possession of 257 of the 1,059 nominating votes by convention time.

Dewey now has 373 publicly undisputed votes while Bricker has 62. Referring to the government's taking over the Montgomery Ward plant, Bricker declared in his address to the convention that "if no business in this country is immune from seizure, then we no longer have a constitutional president. We have a dictator."

The Ohio governor said "today we have an economic autocracy in the United States.... in the hands of political puppets."

"We have been living for more than a decade under a growing absolutism. Unless these policies are reversed by the American people they will unmistakably lead this nation into national socialism."

Other Primaries
With Dewey supporters urging an endorsement of their favorite, North Dakota Republicans convened today to pick 11 convention delegates.

In actions yesterday: Maryland Republicans, although unable under regulations to instruct their 16 delegates, nevertheless voted in convention to recommend that they vote for Dewey at Chicago.

Florida Democrats nominated Millard Caldwell, former congressman, for governor in a runoff race with Rep. Lex Green, and chances are that the nomination will be good for the election in November.

In Georgia, Republicans split into two factions. A predominantly white group selected four unopposed delegates, all white, and a predominantly Negro group chose seven white and seven Negro delegates, instructing them for Dewey.

BIDDLE BACKS UP WARD CO. SEIZURE

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 24—Attorney General Biddle told Congress today that if it believes President Roosevelt exceeded his authority in seizing Montgomery Ward & Co.'s Chicago properties it should clarify the laws so the president "may be guided accordingly."

In a statement read before a special house committee investigating the Ward seizure, Biddle acknowledged there is room for disagreement on the legal aspects of the case. But he said he still believes Mr. Roosevelt had authority to take over the plant, both under the War Labor Disputes act and because such authority exists in war time even in the absence of a specific statute.

He added that for the President to have followed "counsels of timidity" and waited until strikes had spread to other industries "would have been to show irresponsible hesitation at a time when our country's military effort, both in Europe and the Pacific, was approaching a climax and when we were required to devote all of our domestic efforts to the support of our armies."

Tracing the history of what he called the company's "recalcitrant attitude" in 20 cases before the war labor board, Biddle said the WLB believed there was danger of strikes not only in other plants of the company, but also in other companies.

Reappraisal Work Delays Collections

LISBON, May 24—Final reports on the reappraisal of Columbiana county real estate and utilities are expected to be received by County Auditor Irvin Vorndran within the next 10 days, he announced today.

This means that the collection of the new real estate tax will not start until probably the latter part of June. The new tax is that which should have started last December. Tax statements for some districts where appraisal records have been completed have been compiled by Deputy County Treasurer Vincent Judge, but these will not be mailed to property owners until the final valuation duplicates have been received from the auditor.

As soon as the forthcoming tax collection settlement is distributed, the treasurer's office will begin the collection of the regular "June" tax.

CLEVELAND RATION OFFICIAL IS JAILED

CLEVELAND, May 24—Assistant U. S. District Attorney John J. Kane, Jr., said a warrant would be issued today against a former official of defense transportation official in connection with rationing irregularities involving approximately 1,000,000 gallons of gasoline. The assistant prosecutor disclosed a warrant in preparation would be issued before U. S. Commissioner B. D. Nicola. He said it would involve federal charges of purloining gasoline coupons.

Kane said the official, now in custody for questioning, was mentioned in statements by Robert A. Dissauer, chief clerk of Ration board No. 6, who is free on bond after pleading innocent to similar charges.

Dissauer was charged with purloining 5,000 T ration coupons and A. ration bank certificate worth 538,005 gallons.

The investigation also resulted in the closing of Ration board No. 6, Cuyahoga county's largest board, and a promise of federal grand jury assistance.

Wife In Triangle Murder Case Tells Of $5,000 Payoff

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 24—The blonde and buxom 42-year-old wife of veteran Lawyer Robert I. Miller was called back today for further testimony in defense of her husband, charged with the murder of his police officer colleague, Dr. John E. Lind, psychiatrist named by Mrs. Miller as the third corner of a shattered love triangle.

Calmly and quietly yesterday she told the court and jury that Lind "wouldn't let me give him up," and that he had "threatened to tell Bob unless I paid all his bills for him."

Over a period of five years, she said, she gave or loaned Lind about $5,000 in order to keep their relations secret.

But Miller finally found out, she said, and "he cried all night." She continued to see Lind and she recounted how last Feb. 21 Miller followed them and before the eyes of a mid-day shopping crowd, fatally shot the psychiatrist in his car in downtown Washington.

Witnesses have testified that Miller approached Lind's automobile in which Mrs. Miller was sitting, and after a struggle, shot Lind twice and then backed away, saying, "I shot in self-defense."

He said Lind had "pulled a gun" on him. Another pistol was found in an envelope on the automobile seat beside the psychiatrist.

During her testimony yesterday, Mrs. Miller declared that Lind was in the habit of carrying a gun in a paper envelope, and that she had warned her husband that the psychiatrist usually was armed.

"I observed the gun on the seat when I opened the car door to step in, shortly before the shooting," she told the court and jury.

"Bob followed me to the curb and said, 'Marguerite, get out of this car. He started pulling on my arm and leg."

"Dr. Lind told me to stay right where I was, and said, 'I'll shoot that old gray-haired ———' head off."

Miller defense counsel conceded yesterday that the shots that killed Lind were fired "deliberately," but he asserted they were fired in self-defense by a man crazed from weeks of brooding over his wife's infidelity. He was broken in mind and body, said the attorney, H. Mason Welch, by "weeks and weeks of incessant torturing" caused by the "unlawful and illegal relationship between his wife and Lind."

He said Miller's only thought was to get his wife out of the automobile and that he did not fire until Dr. Lind threatened him and reached for a pistol.
